

ABSTRACT

A system and method for performing normalization processing and mediation processing on data. The system and method thus allows a singular system, in particular a work engine, to process and store data from several sources and to perform a mediation process, wherein received data is processed to provide customer requested output, based on a reference table which contains a registry of data identifiers and the mediation processes to be performed on data corresponding to the data identifiers.